The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Worley et al in view of Lien.

Worley teaches an integrated circuit having a plurality of input/output pads and a plurality of "one way conduction elements" connected either to supply lines or ground and responsive to conduct in a protective manner in response to threshold voltages of different levels and polarities. The device taught by Worley includes capacitive elements 251, 151, 371, resistive element 550, and series connected diodes 281 as examples of conventional design practice in the art.

The device taught by Worley differs from the claims by not having a switch element that is off when the circuit is idle and to be turned on when the circuit is in its normal operating mode. Lien teaches an electrostatic discharge protection circuit that has a switch that is off when the circuit is idle and couples the gate of a transistor switch to power supply potential when the circuit is operating in its normal mode.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings to meet the claims because both teachings are ESD protection in the IC (integrated circuit) environment, with Lien teaching that it is known to make the protection circuit responsive to the circuit being idle (unpowered) or in its normal operating mode.
